	Knowledge Transfer Activities:
	• Guest lectureships were taken place where possible, giving the opportunity to the students to hear and discuss issues related to the practical side of management
	• Company visits organized mainly for my PG unit of Operations Management , had the potential of introducing practical concepts of managing organizations and comparing them with the theoretical knowledge acquired in the class.
	• The development of a real-life assessed project mainly in PG units, gave the ability to students to discuss with industry specialists their findings of their potential application of their ideas, especially, in technical oriented units like this one in Human Resource and Operations Management .

Previous Administrative Activities	Director of the PhD Programme in BCU Business School.       This role includes the following responsibilities:         -       Plan the strategy of the programme         -       Organize and coordinate program's targets actions per year         -       Managing performance of supervisors within the Business School         -       Engaging people from other institutions and research groups into the program

- Disseminating information about the program
- Representing the group in BCU research committees

Director of Leadership & Organizational Change Research Group in Hull University

Business School. This role includes the following responsibilities:

- Plan the research strategy of the group
  - Organize and coordinate research targets actions per year
- Managing performance of researchers within the group
- Evaluate members of the group based on their annual research output
- Engaging people from other institutions and research groups
- Disseminating research output of the group
- Representing the group in HUBS research meetings

Business Engagement Champion of OB/HRM Group in Hull University Business School. This role required the following aspects:

- 1. Bringing and lead the implementation of ideas
- 2. Facilitating and sharing information
- 3. Connecting people and processes
- 4. Coordinating pet projects,
- 5. Presenting OB/HRM groups capabilities in supporting businesses

In particular this role was related to:

- Collection of information regularly regarding BE ideas/actions that can be undertaken by the group. Investigation of these ideas in internet, investigating other websites of universities and organisations.
- Engagement with the great majority of other members of the group about BE issues and opportunities. Frequent face-to-face communication with them.
- Search for possible collaborations with the local industry and especially with SMEs at Hull.
- Search for possible collaborations with the international industry and especially this one in South-Eastern Europe where I am well-connected having a wide number of people in my personal network.
- Invitation of specific people that can contribute to the above targets. In this respect I organised a visit of a person that can connect us with companies and industries in South-Eastern European context.
- Collection and organisation of a lot of information from the OB/HRM group regarding their specializations, and how potentially can contribute to the BE effort through professional seminars and consultancy projects.
- Representation of the group in meetings with companies demonstrating group features, skills, capabilities and services that we can offer.
- Share all information coming from other BE team members with my group members attempt to develop synergies in issues like placement, employability of students, etc.
- Participation to all BE committees.

Academic Research Coordinator of BAED. As an Academic Research Coordinator of the Business Administration & Economics Department (BAED) at City College / University of Sheffield, my main duties were related to coordination, monitoring and implementation of BAED's research strategy. I was organizing research groups and supporting staff to develop themselves research-wide. Some targets that have been met were the development of a dynamic research web site as well as the emergence of a research group (Laboratory for Strategic People Management – see section 5).

Member of International Faculty Research Committee of City College. I was a member of City College Research Committee (CRC) as a representative of my department. My role as a member of CRC was to support and encourage the academic and research interests of CITY staff in general and BAED staff in particular with a view to increasing opportunities for their professional growth and enriching their teaching experience. I was involved in the development of the College Research Handbook, a policy and procedural report that organised research output in City college. Also, as a member of this Committee I was responsible for coordinating, monitoring and implementing Departmental priorities.

Research Track Leader on Enterprise, Innovation and Development. I was a Research Track Leader of Research Track 1 (Enterprise, Innovation and Development) at South Eastern Research Centre (SEERC). As a track leader I designed and coordinated the PhD programme. I had under my administrative supervision more than 15 PhD students and their supervisors. Also, I was the liaison person between Business Administration and Economics Department and SEERC, developing synergies and various research efforts. Moreover, my role was to coordinate co-operations between PhD supervisors from both City College and Management School of the University of Sheffield. Furthermore, I initiated synergies for development of proposals for funded projects. Finally, I participated in the organization and delivery of SEERC annual Doctoral Conferences. Research Project Coordinator . I was a project coordinator for a research project called SUMMIT II: Business Incubation & Management Training Institute. This project in which SEERC participated as one of the major partners was a Lenardo da Vinci programme that aimed to investigate training needs of Incubator & Business Centers Managers and then to develop additional modules appropriate for their professional development. My role was to manage and coordinate the team of researchers from the SEERC side. The project completed successfully with the organization of a series of workshops related to the management of Incubation and Business Centres.

progress committee for two years in which we were evaluated special cases of MSc/MA students. Management Teaching Track Leader , Department of Business Administration & Economics, City College, The University of Sheffield. I was the management track leader for two years, having as main responsibilities to coordinate syllabi and coursework handouts between management units and organizing meetings before, during and towards the end of the semesters <ul> <li>with the additional unit leaders.</li> <li>During the past years I have been directly involved in the following initiatives and innovations that have been developed and applied:</li> <li>Performance Evaluation System for Research Output. This was a major effort to organize and promote research output in the International Faculty of City College, The University of Sheffield. This system was based on a series of criteria that both research-oriented and teaching-oriented members of staff need to follow annually. It was a point system according to which members of staff are evaluated annually in terms of their research output. This system was based on a series of criteria that both research-oriented and teaching-oriented members of staff are evaluated annually in terms of their research output. This system aimed to organize research and increase fairness and transparency among members of academic staff.</li> <li>Business Administration &amp; Economics Department (BAED) - Research web site. This web site organized virtually BAED's research effort and demonstrated research output in variety of forms (publications, organizations of workshops/conferences, research events, research projects, etc). Also, the aim of this web site was to be used as major communication platform for research reasons between BAED and external networks and institutions.</li> <li>City Research Handbook (CRH). This was a major effort of CRC that aimed to define research and research excellence and provide information on the way research activity was embedded into the overall CITY strategic plan, and details of procedures that relate to research at the College. Moreover, this handbook helped academic members of staff to either familiarise with the way in which research is organized at CITY or to check a specific procedure.</li> <li>Procedures and forms for research active/oriented members of staff.
